Networking in Berlin's Back Yards

Berlin-based X-Press print shop highly satisfied with prepress connection provided by POLAR.

In the heart of the German capital, the X-Press printing house (with a staff of more than 20) has been producing commercial print jobs since the year 2000.

Most deliveries are meant for customers in Berlin and the surrounding areas. In the spring of 2006, the company added a POLAR 115 XT to the existing POLAR 115 ED. This was an easy decision for X-Press plant manager, Nico Michael. "With our machines we pay attention to quality and when it comes to cutting only POLAR meets our standard."

Purchasing the "Compucut" P-Net Service was the logical choice for the large number of print jobs we handle every day. "Sometimes we have to program the cutting machine for up to 30 customer orders at the same time." With time savings of an average 10 minutes per job, Compucut was one of the best investment decisions we made in the last financial year. The overtime for cutting has been reduced dramatically."
